Welcome to Manoff Market Gardens!

Manoff Market Gardens resides on a protected property that is owned by Heritage Conservancy. It represents a pioneer example of a model partnership between farmers and land trusts like Heritage Conservancy.

Founders of Manoff Market Gardens, Gary and Amy Manoff began farming Heritage Conservancy's land in 1984. Although the property was preserved for farming because it contained highly productive agricultural soils, the orchard and land had been overgrown for 25 years, and a great deal of work had to be done in order to make it suitable for farming. The Manoffs set to work in the '80s to incorporate many facets of environmentally sustainable business practices, including the adoption of a soil conservation plan to preserve the farm's rich soil as well as the creation of waterways and terraces to control and reuse rain water runoff. The Manoffs also installed a water conservation irrigation system to hydrate crops while minimizing water waste.

Today, Manoff Market Gardens raises some of the most sought-after produce in the area, and it continues to cultivate new techniques and revise plans to ensure that the farm runs with the utmost commitment to conservation. It is a living example of a successful sustainable farming project made possible by Heritage Conservancy.
